

What is difference between primary key and foreign Key?

Primary Key	Foreign Key
It must contain unique values.	It can contain duplicate values.
It can not contain null values.	It can contain null values.
A database can have only one primary key.	A database can have more than one foreign key.
It is used to identify records in a table uniquely.	It is used to make a relation between two tables.